INDUSTRIAL ARTS AND VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

VOCATIONAL Education is an integral and vital part of every modern, progressive, and successful system of public school education. General education has a tremendous responsibility in the preparation of youth for life, but one's education is not complete without vocational education. It is this type of education that fits one for livelihood.

Specifically, vocational education is that part of the training and experience of any individual whereby he learns successfully to carry on a useful occupation. No one thing is more important in the industrial, commercial and civic development of our great cities than the setting up of educational facilities, which will provide trained and efficient workers and craftsmen for the work which these cities have to do. And further, the vocational education is more important consideration to provide education for all our boys and girls, education that work which they can accomplish, which they enjoy, and which will in an efficient way, train them to be successful in their daily lives.

Industrial arts and vocational education play their part in the efforts of the schools to develop proper character traits and leisure time interests. These are hand in hand, for it is generally conceded that the use of leisure time can build or destroy character. If this is true, then we can readily see the educational effects, in terms of character building, of the vocational courses. Who will deny the value of the work bench in the attic? Who will deny the need for the garden, the projects, or the raising of chickens? Through the vocational courses, boys and girls acquire interests that persist throughout life, interests that carry them through many a period when Satan could easily devise mischief for idle hands.

Industrial arts education and its relative value in the school curriculum has been a topic of considerable discussion during the past few years. Of course, there is little doubt on the part of the teachers in that field as to the comparative benefits that may be derived from such education in public schools. The most common demand on the part of the critics of education today is that it must be made practical and relate well to the actual experiences of life.

Each of the following statements offers an argument which shows the value of industrial arts education as it is taught in the best schools today:

1. It will develop interest in an understanding of our good mechanical magazines of today.

2. It will develop the individual's understanding of drawing, which is the graphic language of this mechanical world in which we live.

3. It will increase the respectability of the individual.

4. It will enable the mature mind, in years to come to appreciate the mechanical sense of every normal boy, his desire to create, and the satisfaction he derives therefrom.

5. It will encourage habits of thrift.

6. It will stimulate the type of thinking involved when actual accomplishments and not theory? Is the goal?

7. It necessitates putting into operation.

8. It will give the student an understanding of the steps necessary to restore furniture properly.

9. It will teach the boy how to sharpen and care for edged tools.

10. It will relieve any fear a boy may have of attempting to do jobs of work which may require considerable time.

11. It will enable him to handle paints, oils, fillers and stains with care and precaution, so far as equipment concerned.

12. It will add a boy in acquiring a satisfaction derived from orderliness.

13. It will increase respect for another's property.

14. It will stimulate mechanical aptitudes which are not made evident by other types of academic work.

15. It will develop those resources in the individual which will make him the so-called "handy man".

16. It will stimulate creative thinking.

17. It will develop physical and mental co-ordination through the use of the hands, and will in many cases lead to manual skill.

18. It sets up an opportunity to develop hobbies.

19. It will teach appreciation of good workmanship.

20. It will give an understanding of the origin and preservative qualities of the many finishing materials.

Big Business Squawks

The agricultural adjustment act, under which the income of farmers of the nation has been increased billions of dollars, doing much to stimulate recovery, avert bankruptcy of the farm population, was critically assailed in speeches recently before the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

George H. Davis, a Kansas City grain dealer, denounced the government's program to regulate wheat production. An East St. Louis livestock packer, Frank A. Hunter, bitterly attacked government measures under which more money has been put in the farmer's pockets by the corn loan control plan.

The United States Chamber of Commerce represents big business of the nation. It has been exploited year after year while previous Republican administrations have promised farm relief giving only lip service. Now that a workable plan has finally been devised and a congressional bill is being introduced to increase farm prosperity it is not surprising that the few who have profited by the farm's misfortune in previous years are now working to cause their ruin by opposition.

The United States Chamber of Commerce membership is shortlisted in attacking the farm relief program. The first effect, perhaps, is to cut the pockets of some of its wealthy contribution members, such as the stock and bond dealers, the big banks, the big general stores, and the big meat and food processors. It has been said that if the farm relief bill is passed, it will restore the buying power of the farm to the level of 1913, which means that the farm market will be flooded with a manufactured product, and other commodities that the farmer was not able to buy.

Farmer of the nation, unorganized and uneducated, should realize that the organization of powerful wealthy interests are attempting to ruin the farm relief plan which has been the salvation of American agriculture. They should not only oppose efforts of the influential few to take from them benefits that are more justifiable than the concessions which have hitherto been given exclusively to these who now complain because something is being done for the farmer.

SENATE VOTES BONUS

The United States senate on Tuesday passed what is known as the Bonus Bill. The bill provides for the immediate payment of the compensation certificates held by veterans and which are not due for payment for several years. It has been claimed by administration supporters that the President would veto this bill if it is passed. The house of representatives had previously passed the measure, and the President will have to sign it by the time this bill is passed. The fact that Senator M. Allen, who is a warm supporter of the President, made a strong plea for the measure just before it was taken up, would seem to indicate that the bill will get a presidential OK. A bonus amounting to an excess of $2,000,000,000 is estimated to be paid this year. The bill also provides that no more than $100,000,000 be paid in any one year, and that the total amount paid shall not exceed $1,000,000,000.

As chairman of the Senate Tax Commission, I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 4th inst. regarding the proposed bill for the payment of the bonus to the veterans. I am sure that the Senate will take prompt action on this bill, and I am sure that the President will sign it as soon as it is passed.

Yours very truly,
State Tax Commission
JNO. B. LEWIS, Chairman

AFTER THE DEPRESSION

I QUESTION whether we realize what we are piling up on our tax budgets for social insurance, hospitals and health measures, for schools and colleges, which may take up some day to find out their future flow of money stopped by their existing endowment and reserves vastly impaired if inflationary projects get out of hand.

We cannot meet these vast and extending obligations, if only as they are by any "sugaring off" of our activities, by postponing our ingenuity and our energy. The only way we can meet them is to keep our selves alert and active and progressive, and create more and more out of that vast unexplored region of wealth that is necessary to lift all to the highest standards of the most nations.

In such a program there will be no place for the selfish in mind or body, and we will not encourage inactivity of body by any substantial subsidy or inactivity of mind by any form of control or repression.

WORLD CO-OPERATION

By CORDELL HULL
Secretary of State

THE experience of most parts of the world in the last few years in their attempts to promote and preserve political stability, disarmament, peace and other necessary international relationships, undoubtedly by this time has demonstrated the great difficulty of making progress in these vastly important undertakings which a large portion of world population is unconsciously and feeling the serious pinch of economic distress.

The necessity, therefore, was never more apparent for the various countries of the world to give immediate attention to the matter of adopting a sound and comprehensive economic program, both domestic and international, and carrying it forward to the end that the normal processes of domestic and international finance and commerce may be restored and tens of millions of unemployed wage earners may be re-employed. This would afford a solid foundation on which to rebuild stable peace and political structures.

NO MILLENIUM

By PREMIER MUSSOLINI

IN STRESS necessary responsibilities should be assumed without worrying particularly about the results of the French municipal elections or the fluctuations of British by-elections, which seem rather favorable toward labor, indicating a "race to pacifism" purely for reasons of internal politics.

Stress, in other words, should represent a fixed point in the stormy sea of European politics; a fixed point which must mean in the first place renunciation of the dangerous Utopias of disarmament. Fascist Italy has turned her back on these Utopias ever since 1922.

It is understandable therefore that the interest and curiosity of the world should be concentrated on the imminent Stress conference. But let us avoid premature enthusiasm; let us not expect a millennium.

IRISH FREEDOM

By JAMES L. VALERA
President of the Irish Republic

THERE is a very simple test as to whether we are free and that is to let the people of this island freely decide the question.

Let there be a plebiscite of all the people in this country as to whether they are satisfied with the present relations or whether they want to have their freedom expressed in the form of a republic. The British government has been asked to acknowledge the right of accepting such a test, but thus far the challenge remains unaccepted.

The majority of the Irish people do not want their country partitioned. They want liberty to decide whether their own form of government should be monarchic or republican. In 1921 the treaty was accepted under duress and the threat of war and for no other reason.

MUNITIONS FOR PEACE

By SIR HERBERT LAWRENCE
British Munitions Magazine

TO SUGGEST because your company is engaged in the production of means of defense and of equipment required by the navy, army and air force that its directors desire to foster war is as untrue as it is unjust.

The directors and shareholders know that their cost the sorrow and suffering war entails, the waste of human life and material, the financial loss posterity must bear and the damage done to the economic structure of the world.

Although armaments for the purpose of national defense in your country constitute a great part of your company's production, the maintenance of peace is in the best interests of both your company and the community generally.

Lesson for May 12 THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

LESSON TEXT—Ephesians 4:1-7.
10:16. Acts 2:41-43.
GOLDEN TEXT—So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another.—Romans 12:5.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Going to God's House.
JUNIOR TOPIC—What a Church Is.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What the Church Is For.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Nature and Work of the Church.

1. What it is (Eph. 4:3-6).
It is the body of redeemed men and women of Jews and Gentiles called out from the world, regenerated and united to Jesus Christ as head and to each other by the Holy Spirit (1 Cor. 12:13).

2. It was unknown in Old Testament times (Eph. 3:5, 6).

3. It was predicted by Christ (Matt. 16:18). Shortly before Christ went to the cross he spoke of the Church as still in the future. He said, "I will build my church."

4. It came into being at Pentecost (Acts 2).

5. Christ is the Head of the Church (Eph. 1:22, 23).

Jesus Christ is to the Church what the head is to the human body. He is so vitally its head as to direct all its activities.

6. The Unity of the Church (Eph. 4:6).

Having in verses 1-3 of this chapter set forth the virtues necessary for the realization and maintenance of unity in the Church, in verses 4-6 he sets down the fundamental unities which make unity of the body.

1. One body (v. 4). Since all believers have been united to Christ by faith, they are members of the one body of which he is the head.

2. One Spirit (v. 4). This is the Holy Spirit. He is the agent in regeneration and the baptizer into the one body and is the animating life uniting the believers to Christ and to one another.

3. One hope (v. 4). Completed redemption at the coming of the Lord is the Christian's hope.

4. One Lord (v. 5). The one ruler of the Church is the Lord Jesus Christ.

5. One faith (v. 5). This faith is the one doctrine which centers in Christ and the one instrument which unites the believer to Christ.

6. One baptism (v. 5). This means the baptism of the Holy Spirit—that sovereign act of the Spirit which unites believers to Jesus Christ as head and to each other as members of his body.

7. One God and Father of all (v. 6). This is the almighty Creator and Sustainer of the universe.

IV. How the Church Grows (Eph. 4:11-16). It is through the ministry of certain officials having the gifts of the Spirit.

1. Gifts bestowed upon the Church (v. 11).

a. Apostles. These were appointed by Christ to superintend the preaching of the gospel in all the world and the creation of an authoritative body of teaching, the Scriptures.

b. Prophets. These ministers were given for the expounding of the Scriptures.

c. Evangelists. These men have been traveling missionaries.

d. Pastors and teachers. The pastor was a shepherd-teacher, the two functions inherent in the one office.

2. The object of the ministry of the Church (v. 12).

a. "Perfecting of the saints." Perfecting means the mending of that which has been rent; the adjusting of something dislocated.

b. "For the work of the ministry" (v. 12). The perfecting of the saints has as its object the qualification to render efficient service.

c. "Edifying of the body of Christ." Edify means to build up.

3. The duration of the Church's ministry (v. 13). It is to continue until

a. There is unity of faith.

b. We come into the knowledge of the Son of God. Unity of faith can only be realized when the members of the Church come to know Jesus Christ as the very Son of God.

c. A perfect man, which is the measure of the stature of Christ.

4. The blessed issue of the ministry of the Church (vv. 14-16).

a. Not tossed to and fro and carried about by every wind of doctrine (v. 14). Knowledge of Christ as the very Son of God is the sure defense against the efforts of cunning men.

b. Speaking the truth in love (vv. 15, 16). Holding the truth of Jesus Christ as the Son of God in the spirit of sincerity and love will issue in the symmetrical development of believers, causing them to grow up in him as head.

QUIET THOUGHTS

Every man is worth just so much as the things are worth about which he busies himself.—Marcus Aurelius.

People glorify all sorts of bravery except the bravery they might show on behalf of their nearest neighbors.—George Eliot.

What St. Paul wrote to the Christians in Rome nearly two thousand years ago is as true today as ever it was. There is "peace in believing."

SEEN and HEARD around the National Capital

By CARTER FIELD

Washington.—The beautiful friendship between James M. Curley and Franklin D. Roosevelt, which grew so vigorously in the spring and summer of 1932, and appeared to bloom in 1933, seems to have withered. No official statement as to just why the governor of Massachusetts and the President of the United States are no longer David and Jonathan is forthcoming, but there are rumors afloat.

Back in the golden days of this friendship there were many friends of both who predicted that James Roosevelt, sometimes called the favorite son of the Chief Executive, would one day, with the backing of Curley, be governor of the Bay state. But now this prospect is also out of the window, for the time being at least. James no longer holds forth at Cambridge. He has moved to New York, perhaps temporarily, but certainly with no obvious intention of retaining his residence in Massachusetts.

Unkind critics say the instigator of the move was none other than the President himself, and that it was not wholly unconnected with the cooling in the friendship between himself and Governor Curley. It was partly through James Roosevelt that Curley was so successful in getting many of his friends and lieutenants put on the federal payroll in key positions. Certainly most of the appointees desired by Curley had the endorsement of James Roosevelt when they went across the desk of Patience Dispenser Curley, the genial postmaster general.

In fact, Curley was even willing to appoint former Representative Peter F. Taggart as Boston postmaster, on Curley's recommendation, although both Senators Walsh and Coolidge had made it clear they would block his confirmation.

Got Cold Shoulder

Back in his campaign for the governorship Curley confided to the Massachusetts electorate that he, if elected, would be able to bring home a lot of federal appropriations to the Bay state, whereas he hinted what would Massachusetts expect of an old line Republican like Bacon?

During the recent visit of New England governors to Washington to demand help for their closing textile mills, to insist on something being done about Japanese competition, and to protest against the cotton processing tax, Governor Curley, it appeared to some of them, rather got the cold shoulder.

In fact, one of the governors remarked afterwards that when he came to Washington from now on he was coming alone.

Which is a far cry from the days when Roosevelt was clapping Curley on the shoulder, telling him how sorry he was he could not put him in the cabinet, inquiring whether he would not be acceptable to Mussolini as ambassador to Rome, and later, on this blooming day, offering him the Polish embassy.

Just as Curley's recent speech before the General Motors show at Boston, when he sided with the New Deal rather effectively, was a far cry from his speeches, either in 1932 or 1934, from which his auditors got the distinct impression that Roosevelt was one of the world's noblemen, of unequalled ability.

Who threw the first stone is always an interesting question, and there is a lot of speculation about this case, especially since James Roosevelt was literally moved out of Massachusetts by the President. But certainly Relief Administrator Hopkins and Public Works Administrator Ickes have not helped to smooth matters over. To put it mildly, they have not looked out for Governor Curley's interest. Curley hit back vigorously, as he always does, whereupon the White House itself gave him a reception which did not enhance his prestige with the other New England governors.

Italy Clamps Down

Negotiations—quite unofficial—with Italy to induce that country to remove her very drastic restrictions on American imports, have gotten precisely nowhere to date, and the prospect is not very bright. Italy has clamped down on imports of American automobiles, office machinery, farm machinery, cotton, and dozens of other products to just one-fourth of the 1934 figures. And the 1934 figures were not very large!

But the representatives of Italy, discussing the situation informally with State department officials, say they would be glad to buy if they only had something to use for money! And it is proving very difficult to answer them. For what they mean, of course, is that they cannot go on indefinitely buying more than they sell. So it comes down to this: America must take more Italian goods if she wants to keep on selling to Italy as she did up to this month. (The restrictions have just gone into effect).

"What do you want?" the State department negotiators in effect asked the Italians:

"We want your market opened up for our lemons, tomato paste, silk and hats—straw and felt hats," the Italians replied in effect.

There is enough political dynamite in that answer to wreck any political party, and the terrible part of it is the Italians know it as well as the State department officials who were nonplussed at the answer. Which is one of the reasons why Secretary of State Hull's reciprocal trade agreements have not made more progress.

Curiously enough the Italians have not manifested the expected desire that something be done about wines. They are just discouraged about America as a wine market. They believe the country has lost its taste for good wines, and while they of course do not concede that French wines are superior to Italian wines, they know that France is suffering from the same disappointment.

As a Wine Market

A very important Italian official in Washington recently dined with some Italian-American friends. They had all been born in Italy, and he presumed of course that their taste in wine would be good.

"Maybe it was a hint, and I did not recognize it," he told the writer. "Maybe they thought I would at once send them a case of really good wine from the embassy. But the fact is they served me some perfectly miserable wine. I think it was California. Certainly it was not imported. My own thought is that if Italian people, as a result of American prohibition, have had their tastes so impaired, what hope is there for our recovering even the market for our wines that we had before prohibition?"

California, and to a lesser extent New York state and some other sections, are certainly out to get whatever market there is in this country for low-priced wines. California's problem on this is simple, but interesting. When prohibition came, many California vineyards were plowed under. Then arose a tremendous demand for grapes from would-be wine makers. So the price of grapes soared. California overdid the planting in attempting to meet this demand, but this was not apparent until about 1930, because it takes grapes some time to come into bearing.

Then, to get rid of the grapes at some price or other, there developed the business of experts making wine for people in their own cellars, thus avoiding the tolls of the law. This business mounted to unbelievable proportions in the last two years of prohibition. They blew up, and it became necessary to market the California wine in the normal way. Which California has been doing, to the great distress of foreign wine makers.

But any tinkering with the wine tariff in behalf of Italy or France, or any other country, will find a solid phalanx of Californians ready to die in the breach, if necessary.

From Cotton to Corn

Prospects that the South will buy less corn from Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and other big corn raising states of the Mid-West are already disturbing senators and members of the house from that region. So far there are no political repercussions in the corn raising states, but they are coming, unless some very shrewd observers miss their guess very badly.

What has happened is this: cotton planters, taking money not to raise cotton, in many instances have turned to corn. This is said to be true all through the cotton belt. But the cotton belt has always been a splendid market for middle western corn. Just to cite a typical example, Georgia formerly bought about 60,000,000 bushels a year, though perfectly capable of supplying her own corn needs without bringing in a bushel.

So this splendid market for mid-west corn just may not be there this year! Whereupon there will be very loud outcries indeed against a government which has paid the southern planters not to raise cotton.

It is rather curious, but in the old days before the boll weevil became such a menace in the southeastern states, the Department of Agriculture campaigned all the time for diversification. The department experts waited the cotton planters to turn to other crops, to produce their own pork, their own milk and butter, their own corn, etc.

The boll weevil came along after years of intensive but utterly futile effort in this direction. Some sections were ruined. In one county of Georgia there is a monument to the boll weevil, in a tribute to the increased prosperity it ravages eventually produced for that section.

Gets Another Push

Now along comes the cotton curtailment program, and gives another push in the same direction. Which is all very well for the South—though there are those who have their grave doubts about that, what with the speedy development of foreign cotton production, which makes one wonder about the future—but what about the producers who formerly supplied the South with what the South is now raising? Particularly the corn growers of the Middle West?

This particular storm has not burst. Yet it would be most timely at the moment, with AAA under fire about the cotton processing tax, with New England and southern mills closing down alleged because of Japanese textile competition, and AAA none too popular anyhow.

No one in Washington seems to be taking a long range view of the problem. But it is most interesting that the storm center of trouble seems likely to be in the Middle West—the states from Indiana to Iowa—by harvest time. This is important because if the storm center were in the South, while there might be plenty of political thunder and lightning there, no one would figure it very seriously with respect to political prospects next year.

Says WILL ROGERS

BEVERLY HILLS.—Well all I know is just what I read in the papers, or what I gather as I roll down hill and gather no moss. You know all these fellows that write continually and grow and grow instead of giving everybody a pain in the neck as I do. When I write something that don't agree with em they throw me in the ash can and they don't read me any more, and nifty next week I might agree with em, but they don't wait to see.

But it's as I was saying before. Some other minor thought interrupted me. O. O. McIntyre, Irvin Cobb, Bugs Baer, and of course Mr. Brisbane, they can just keep growing in popular favor, for they can write about anything, and they can make it marvelously readable. Bugs makes it funny, and when I say funny brother I mean funny. He has the queerest and most unique and original slant on humor than any man in the world. You know darn it that fellow is a marvel.

Aud Cobb of course has lived and outlived wrote and outwrote all the men of his time. Humor, but humor combined with a great sense of human understanding. No "Nut" humor in Cobb. It's based on years of reporting. And by the way the best reporter the old New York World ever had. And its based on years of mingling, studying, and getting next to all classes of people. I would rather have him on a movie story with me than any man I ever saw. He knows what to keep you from doing. Its kinder like a good wife, that don't "Yes" you all the time. They just tell you where you are not so hot.

Homers Croy who wrote "They Had To See Paris" is another that knows just what a character should do, and Owen Davis, the great playwright, (who has had more successes over a course of years than all of em) he knows character. There is lots of our stories where we do thing to get a laugh, but its not the thing that the real man who we are playing would do. Well thats all not done by one man. Its done by two or three men working with a director who can tell when a laugh is out of tune. Cobb, Croy, and Davis can do it.

Now this fellow Oh Oh McIntyre is a character, that same as one we play on the stage, but he is fortunate in knowing what to do himself. Nobody has to walk around and tell him. His readers picture him, they visualize him meeting these various celebrities. They see him walking among the out of the way places in New York. They know that they are getting an authentic picture of New York in all its phases. (And is read more than all the other N. Y. writers put together). He can sit down at his desk and write a column about his typewriter ribbon not working, but darn it, thats what happens. We dont know one tenth of these people that drop in, or that he meets on the street, or at various parties. They are Esquimos to us, but by golly before we are finished we think we know em too. He likes to use big words, but he is sure to have enough little ones in there, so us dumb ones dont lose out entirely. And he is liable to run you to the dictionary, (he never did me for I havent got any. I imagine you had guessed that by now).

That brings us to my older friend, Mr. Brisbane, the daddy of all of em. A man I expect with more talents than any man in the newspaper game. A great judge of what millions of people want to read. If a newspaper is bogged down in quick sand, or if it has the heaves, Mr. Hearst sends old Doc Brisbane there. He operates. The patient not only recovers, but thrives. No other writer in America can do that. They can write, but when they are finished writing then they are through. They may know how to write their editorial, or column, but they dont know what should be in the 50 or 100 columns.

But to go back to the subject of my original oration, Mr. Brisbane knows an awful lot about a lot of things. I didnt know what caused the earthquakes in Japan till awny last week when he told it. They are on the edge of a tremendously deep canyon in the ocean, and its the land slipping off in this canyon. Now that makes sense and its plain as its Well thats what he writes. They are fortunate men that can do that. I am always kidding about something the Democrats did to the Republic, and then I will sing a praise of some Republic uprising, and I will have all the Democrats down on me. My juak is always controversial. Thats all because I havent got the range of knowledge, the background of reading, the literary foundation. There is just so much you can say in praise, or in reprimand of our Government. And when I just keep saying it over and over again, it dont stand up like those other boys, and dont I know it.

Bedtime Story for Children

DANNY MEADOW MOUSE, shied with thankfulness and relief as he reached the other side of the Laughing Brook by way of a tunnel. He had felt the shivers of the long war trail, and he had seen the long war trail where Nanny Meadow Mouse was busy working for him. But he was on the right side of the stream.

Crept to the Entrance and Peeped Out. The Pool and the Laughing Brook. He no longer needed to think of the Big Pickled or of Snapper the Turtle. He had left Billy Mink and Reddy Fox way back by the Sniffing Pool, so he felt quite safe from them.

Of course when he should reach the edge of the Green Meadows and stare across to his snug little home he would have to watch for Reddy or old Timmy Fox, but just now he felt quite safe and it was a very good feeling indeed.

Being at last on the right side of the Laughing Brook, Danny felt that he had earned a rest, but having the wisdom of long experience he first looked for a place where he could rest in safety. Just a few feet from the end of the log on which he crossed the Laughing Brook was another old log. At once Danny scampered over to it for he long ago learned that old logs are quite likely to be hollow and when they are they make the very finest retreats in all the Great World for timid little people who wish to keep out of sight.

Just as he hoped, this old log was hollow and the only entrance was through an old knot hole barely big enough for Danny to squeeze through. Making sure that no one else was there, Danny squeezed in and promptly forgot all his recent troubles and was happy, which fortunately is the way of the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows.

In two minutes Danny was fast

Do YOU Know—

That the month of January was named after Janus, an early Roman divinity. It was added to the Roman calendar by Numa, 713 B.C., who made it the first month because Janus presided over the beginning of all business. In 1752 the legal year in England was ordered to begin on January 1 instead of on March 25.

asleep. How long he slept he didn't know but suddenly he was wide awake. He heard nothing, but he had a feeling of uneasiness. He crept to the entrance and peeped out. The moonlight lay full on the old log across the Laughing Brook and even as he looked a soft dark form leaped up on the farther end and began to run swiftly across with nose close to the ground.

It was Billy Mink, and Danny knew Billy's wonderful nose had found his snug somewhere on the other bank and that it would lead Billy straight to that hollow log. And so it happened. It was scarcely a minute before Billy's nose was poked in at the knot hole and Billy took one long sniff. "Ah, ha," said Billy. "So this is where you are. Come out like a gentleman and be eaten."

QUESTION BOX

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have an uncle who swears from morning till night. I never heard such language as he uses. Where in the world do you think he learned to swear like that?

Sincerely,

HELEN DAMM.

Answer: My dear Miss Damm, if your uncle does what you claim for him I assure you he could not have learned it any place. It must have been a gift.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a poor widow and have a hard time making both ends meet. I now find out that I could make some extra money by taking in washing. I don't know any people who would do their wash, so please tell me the best way to get in touch with those kind of people, will you?

Yours truly,

And then give your address.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I met a boy at a dance last night and I like him very much. During our conversation, he said to me as if he was bragging a bit. He said that his brother lived in England and that he was before the king and queen every day and keeps his hat on. Do you believe that?

Sincerely,

ROD A RIBABY.

Answer: Sure I do. He is their chauffeur.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have just started in college and am taking up a course in gardening and tanning. I have been paying particular attention to the caterpillar and have discovered they always climb trees and eat the leaves. Can you tell

SAM

By ANNE CAMPBELL

SAM is an officer walking our beat. No one could live on a quieter street. If there were a riot, our Sammy would be quiet. The riot, and never disturb our repose. Each child on our street when he goes to sleep, knows He's under a special policeman's good care! Sammy is there!

And many a child on our street when he prays Says: "Please God, bless Sam, 'cause he has to sleep days!" While children are sleeping, his watch he is keeping, And sleeping is better because we have Sam. The children sleep on if they hear a door slam. He takes all the grief that they might have to bear! Sammy is there!

Sometimes the dear children drift off into dreams, And thinking of God, and of Sammy, it seems That some one who's thinking of others, unliking, And thinking not once of himself, is so fine. He must have a lot in his heart that's divine. So the children sleep tight, and the whole night is fair! Sammy is there!

Double Duty Dress

This tailored ensemble of navy and white plaid dotted sheer tulle does double duty. The jacket with its white lining revers and big sleeves makes the costume an informal dinner dress or serves as a little wrap over the low cut gown.

How to keep them from eating the leaves?

Sincerely,

CHRIS ANN TENUM.

Answer: Let them climb telegraph poles.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Do you believe hanging a man will stop crimes?

Truly yours,

ALICE TROCUTION.

Answer: I sure do. I have never heard of a man committing a crime after he was hanged.

WHEN FINDING OF PIN REALLY WAS STROKE OF LUCK

The belief that there is good luck in the finding of a pin traces back to the days when it actually was a stroke of fortune to find one. When pins were first introduced to the market they were expensive. Anyone who found one was lucky, because he could sell it if he didn't wish to keep it for his own use. Pins don't have much resale value now, but the superstition continues to carry weight.

Magicians and fortune tellers of ancient times used crickets to foretell the future. Crickets in the house were considered the best of good omens. Pliny, the Roman historian, tells how generally they were esteemed as bringers of good luck and good news. To kill one, therefore, was bad luck.

The days when the horse was the main means of locomotion are not far distant. In those days if a horse threw a shoe he was likely to become lame, necessitating his rider's further procedure afoot. If the rider could find the shoe by backtracking a short distance he was a lucky individual indeed, for he could tack it back on the horse's hoof. Hence, finding horseshoes became an omen of good luck.

Superstitions involving the crowing of roosters trace to ancient days. A crowing cock was considered a sign of good luck in warfare because the rooster crows when victorious. Themistocles attributed his victory over a Persian army to his having heard a cock crow before the battle. The belief that a man has one rib less than a woman arose from the account of creation in Genesis. Men and women, of course, have the same number of ribs.

Modern Coffee Table For Saw-and-Hammer Boys

MANUAL training students and other amateur woodworkers who would like to surprise their mothers and wives with a piece of their own craftsmanship will make a happy choice if they build the modern coffee table suggested in the accompanying illustration. The use of one-quarter inch pressed wood, obtainable at almost any building supply dealer, not only makes for uniformly good appearance, but also simplifies construction. Pressed wood, used in major construction and for fine interior trim as well, is perhaps one of the most versatile and durable building materials ever developed. It is a one hundred per cent wood product, made by exploding clean waste wood and then pressing the resulting fibers into a thin hard board that will not split, chip, crack, warp, or swell, under any normal conditions. It saws readily, and screws or nails may be driven as
